

Jewish Voice for Peace @jvplive

Jul 7, 2025 · 6 tweets · jvplive/status/1942350411911795197

“Sinjil is now a big prison,” explains Mousa Shabaneh, Palestinian resident of the occupied West Bank town, as Israeli forces installed a metal fence through his tree nursery. The fence surrounds and isolates the town, leaving only one sealed entrance, guarded by Israeli forces.

Over the past 20 months, the Israeli military has rapidly escalated its campaign of ethnic cleansing in the occupied West Bank, hand in hand with Israeli settler violence—displacing, killing, and erasing Palestinian communities at the fastest pace in decades.

@Mondoweiss reports that the Israeli government's newly approved $90 million "Fabric of Life" project will force Palestinians to travel through underground tunnels, reserving surface roads for Israelis, in another attempt to force Palestinians out of Jerusalem. A single tunnel will connect 1.5 million Palestinians in the southern West Bank to the rest of the territory, effectively splitting the region in two. The project aims to remove Palestinians from areas near Jerusalem, expanding the Israeli government's control from the city to the Jordan Valley.

This weekend, Israeli settlers, accompanied by the Israeli military, began forcibly displacing the Mu'arrajat community in the Jordan Valley. Overnight, settlers established an illegal outpost, seizing homes and livestock, enabled by Israeli soldiers.

The Israeli military continues its prolonged assaults on refugee camps in Jenin, Tulkarem, Nur Shams, Far'a, and Nablus—displacing thousands, depopulating entire camps, and blocking residents from returning. In Jenin, the Israeli military is on its 168th day of attack, marked by mass arrests, widespread destruction, and the demolition of over 600 homes, displacing 22,000 people.

We unite against state-sponsored killing and ethnic cleansing. We demand an end to the US's continual funding of atrocities from the occupied West Bank to Gaza. As violence against Palestinians escalates, it's critical that we stand firmly and resist the ongoing Nakba perpetuated and escalated by the Israeli state.

...